Pilot International was well-founded by visionary women and set on a true course by its insightful Code of Ethics. When each of us chose to seek membership, we knew what we were agreeing to live by. Pilot has stood the test of time. Working with, supporting and expanding the scope of our focus, Brain-related Disorders, is now our collective purpose.

The friendships we make through our Clubs, is enhanced with our participation in District and International activities and events. Our personal leadership skills are developed by accepting responsibilities and duties at all levels.

Therefore, my vision for Pilot includes building on our accomplishments and seeking ways to develop better growth opportunities and truly become the world's organization of choice.

We have only just begun to embrace the many avenues of our mission. I envision the day when households will know the name of Pilot and that its members are people of their community improving many aspects of Brain-related Disorders.

I envision a concerted effort by the organization at large, to energetically and systematically plan, support and develop growth. I would like to see us actively seek development in the countries where Pilot once existed and vigorously promote the values of membership in Pilot today. This will strengthen the meaning of our name and enhance the organization as a whole.

President Obama says it is a time for new beginnings – let us have the courage to face that renewal and do what it takes to make it a Pilot reality.
