Good morning, I am Gwendolyn Yarbrough and I am a nominee for the office of Director of Pilot International.

As we celebrate our past, the present, and the future of Pilot International our mission is clear that we must be about reclaiming inactive members, maintaining our current membership, and looking to the future for new members. Our mission is clear that the course we charter must be one of providing worthwhile volunteer service in the area of brain related projects throughout the world. In providing projects that teach us to "Protect our brain for life" while teaching children to "Play Safe and Play Smart" we will insure the quality of life in the world will be better for all. We must increase our membership in Pilot and Anchor while motivating our members to be involved in our respective communities. We must provide opportunities for education and training to endow Pilot International and Pilot International Foundation with quality leadership. We must be enthusiastic, exciting, and most of all willing to share Pilot throughout the world. We must continue to review policies, procedures, and forms to make our documents more efficient and in doing so we will eliminate unnecessary paperwork. Marketing Pilot is a key and essential tool to improve our services and to get the word out about Pilot International our Foundation and the steps toward becoming more global through service to others. To borrow a term from the late Walt Disney, Pilots must become "Ambassadors" to the world through leadership and service to mankind.
